

Are you interested in participating in clinical research related to your recovery?

The National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) is conducting a research study looking at brain imaging changes at the start of sobriety in physicians and other health professionals participating in a Physicians Health Program (PHP) or equivalent.

- The study includes an ONLINE-only component, with total participation about 4-7 hours
- Eligible participants may also be invited to complete the main study, which includes 1-3 in-person visits to NIDA at the Johns Hopkins Bayview Campus in Baltimore
- In-person visits comprise a full day of procedures, including two brain imaging (MRI) sessions at each visit, and an overnight stay in an on-campus clinical research unit the evening prior to the study visit
- Compensation is about $100 for the online only study, and $335 to $905 for completing the in-person imaging visits. NIDA will cover transportation expenses
- If you participate in the imaging sessions, you will also receive a picture of your brain on a T-shirt

To learn more, contact: Betty Jo Salmeron, MD
BSalmeron@nih.gov (preferred)
(443) 740-2651

Scan QR code to learn more

* Participation in this study is completely voluntary, not part of PHP participation, or part of any treatment and does not provide any direct benefit. Whether or not a person participates will not have any impact on their status at a PHP or future treatment.